While there are a number of draw-backs to being a second baby (neglect, rough older brothers who steal toys) on Saturday Luke discovered that there are advantages too. While first children are earnestly fed on home prepared purees and all that is healthy Luke was able to blissfully tuck into his first icecream at the tender age of six months old. And he wasn't giving it up for anything! Eventually I wrested the remnants off him and got help to restore some semblance of cleanliness to the sticky, happy, chocolate flavoured mess that was Luke.
